TRAVEL TO

Bagnoregio is an Etruscan town sitting on an eroding crest of rock with a passageway that was cut by the Etruscans 2,500 years ago. Inside the gate, as we walk through the worn stone walls to enjoy lunch prepared by one of the 12 residents of the village, history comes alive and each corner we turn takes us to another stunning view. Because the hill on which it stands is wearing away, this historic village is also called the Dying City. Just a 2 hour drive from Rome, Civita di Bagnoregio is one of our favorite places to explore!
